John's Jukebox

John's Jukebox is Low Fell Ukes' second co-produced songbook. The group has been playing at Residential Care Homes for over eight years and felt that we should engage with residents in compiling the songbooks we use to entertain them.

This book is a collaboration between Richard Taylor and John Paine, a resident at Armstrong House Care Home. John has been living with rheumatoid arthritis for most of his life and is extremely restricted in his range of movement. John's condition, however, has not limited his enjoyment of music which covers material from all eras. He creates song lists to be played at the care homes armchair exercise sessions and takes a real interest in all forms of music in the home.

John has a huge knowledge of singers and bands, and we have spent time together in compiling this book, trying to out-trivia each other.

John's aim has been to provide songs which are not only some of his favourites but tunes which will be enjoyed by all residents of care homes. We hope the songs in John's Jukebox will provide enjoyment for listeners and players alike.
